CANTERBURY, B.C., THURSDAY, SEPT. 26, 1901.

An Italian writes to the Mayor of Montreal that twelve Italians have come over to assassinate the Duke on his arrival in Montreal, but it proved a fake.

In an article on the burning of negroes in the south the Chicago Inter Ocean says: Between the anarchism of these orgies of lynchings and burnings of negroes—more than 3,000 of them in the past ten years—and the anarchism and devilism of assassination there is a difference; but there is more likeness than difference.

If two parties have a dispute about property, the courts arbitrate the matter and the parties to the affair must abide by the decision, whether they like it or not; but when a great corporation on the one hand and workers on the other have a dispute the fogies say that the courts have no jurisdiction to adjust the matter, but should stand to one side and see fair play only and let them fight it out if it turns the country into insurrection and possibly civil war! Compulsory arbitration is all right where property is concerned—that's different! Men are not worthy the attention of a court. They are only playthings for the rich private owners.—Larlean Eagle.

At present writing the indications are that James Dunsmuir and Joseph Martin will form a government, although it is hard to tell what a day will bring forth. Premier Dunsmuir evidently recognizes the inevitable, namely, that neither he nor his colleagues are equal to the wily Joseph and to make the best of it the premier has decided to hold on to his title and allow Joe to do the work.

There is a good deal of truth in the way an exchange sizes up the twin leaders: "Joe has the brains and experience. Jim has the money and good intentions."

Practically everyone recognizes Martin's superior ability, yet he is recognized as a dangerous man and while he may never be vested with power it seems his might will be felt so long as he remains in the Province. Joe is our greatest politician, but it is a business leader we need.

Two British Columbia bills, one regarding the immigration into Canada and the other respecting the employment of Chinese and Japanese on public works, have been disallowed by the Ottawa cabinet at the instance of the British government. The reason given for disallowing these bills was that the Legislature refused to amend its legislation as regards Japanese.

If this Province must suffer from the yellow and brown plague because it suits the British government, we fail to see the justice. Our country is a grand, glorious and wealthy one, but if our workmen must compete with Japan we must begin to figure on paupers and poor-houses. If legislation cannot be passed to stop the Chinese and Japanese immigration then the boycott system will surely be employed and that means quarreling among ourselves.

Sendon Paystreak: If there is a mining man in the Fleen who does not believe that the government should build a refinery we do not know his name. Men who have spent the best years of their lives learning the business and have invested all the money they are worth in mines are free in declarations that relief can be found only in a government refinery. Mining superintendents, managers, stockholders, foremen and workmen who know their business in all its dips, spurs and angles are unanimous in the opinion that British Columbia could successfully operate a refinery. The only people we hear kicking against a government refinery are the vested rights grannies who are living in an age of fifty years ago.

If there is one man in British Columbia who does not believe that the silver-lead ores produced in the Province should be smelted, refined and manufactured within the Province, we would like to have his photograph.

British Columbia mines are building up United States smelters, refineries and manufactories. This is so manifestly wrong that no reasonable man can find a right in it.

The member for this riding, Hon. W. C. Wells, has taken a very liberal view of the present political crisis. As we reported last week Mr. Wells believes there has been too much attention paid Mr. Martin and he considers that there is no reason to be put about in this connection.

It would be better for this Province if there were more legislators with the same business tact as Mr. Wells and who, like him, were not given to blatant sentiments. It is well-known that Mr. Wells fought Martinism and won in last election. Nevertheless, notwithstanding, he would have us know that he is not so bigoted or small-minded that he would seek to upset the government and bring on an election, because his opponent has seen fit to endorse the policy of the government which he supports.

Mr. Wells has accomplished a great deal for this riding and being a politician of ability he may be relied upon to take the course in which he can accomplish the most good for his constituents. Fortunately, at the last election he made no promises to follow any clique, but was elected with the understanding that he would pursue whatever course he thought best in the interests of his constituents—in common parlance, there are no strings attached.

Union Hotel.

PETERBOROUGH, B.C.

Having purchased this well known Hotel, we ask a continuance of the patronage enjoyed by Mr. Skelton, the former proprietor, so liberally given him by the people of this district. We also wish to inform the general public that we are making arrangements to remodel and thoroughly renovate the building and will build an addition so it can be given better accommodation. The housework will be excellent, the rooms airy and decorated with the latest results of the wall paper artist.

The Bar is now replete with the most modern, as well as ancient, brands of wine and liquors. The Dining Room is always provided with food that is tasty, digestible and satisfying to the inner economy of man. We have good stables and horses for sale on hire.

SOME TIME YOU SHALL KNOW.

Let night, my darling, as you slept,
I thought I heard you sigh,
And to your little crib I crept,
And watched a space there;
And then I stooped and kissed your brow
For, oh, I love you so—
You are so young to know it now,
But some time you shall know
Some time when, in a darkened place
Where others come to weep,
Your eyes shall look upon a face
Calmed in eternal sleep;
The voiceless lips, the wrinkled brow,
The patient smile shall show—
You are so young to know it now,
But some time you may know.
Look backward, then, into the years,
And see me here to-night;
See, O my darling, how my tears
Are falling as I write;
And feel once more upon your brow
The kiss of long ago—
You are so young to know it now,
But some time you shall know it now.
—Eugene Field.

JIM'S SWEETHEART.

Mother put on her Sunday best,
Her blue wedding gown,
And white straw bonnet neatly tied
With strings of faded brown;
We woke before the roosters crowed
And started in the dew.
To see the boat race, for our Jim
Was captain of the crew.
You see, six olive branches came
To bless our honest home—
Five slender in the churchyard green
With little stones above;
But one was left in mother's arms—
Stern death was kind to him,
The youngest of our tiny flock,
The sturdy baby, Jim.
He took it in his curly head
To want a college course;
I parted with the pasture lot
And sold the sorrel horse.
We sent him every dollar saved,
And made a society pair
In garments that had long outlived
Their days of useful wear.
We did not want to shame our boy
And so kept out of sight
Behind a row of waving flags
And fluttering kerchiefs white,
But when the slender stalks swept by
The rival crews abroad
We both forgot our shabby clothes
And shouted with the rest.
The surging throng closed up in front,
We could not see our son.
But soon a mighty cheer went up
And told us Jim had won.
The crowd took up the college yell
And sent it in the skies.
And college oars every where Shook out their brilliant dyes.
He stepped ashore, looked up and saw
His mother's wrinkled face,
And hurried to her through the ranks
Of moonlight, silk and lace.
He never gave a single glance
Toward the pretty girls,
But kissed her on the withered lips,
And kissed her silver curls.
His sunburnt face was glorified
With proud and happy smiles;
He did not mind because her hat
Was years behind the fashions,
But led her out before his friends,
A figure quaint and rare.
In stiff old-fashioned blue silk—
"My sweetheart, boys," said Jim,
—Muna Irving, in Leslie's Weekly.

Starvation or Poison.

Many and hard have been the blows struck against poor old Ireland, it is my belief none of their orators. The lately Sissenach, according to them, has been doing little else but make laws to Ireland's detriment and famine and pestilence have also got in their deadly work. But through it all there was one or two's light streaks. Now science comes in and proposes to remove one of them,
The action of science is a regular star pelted blow. Of course we know that scientific research has shown that nearly all our articles of diet contain elements of poison. Bread may contain alum; milk may secrete a deadly substance, known as ptomaine; meat may contain trichinosis, and even water may abound with numerous things deleterious to life.
But until now we had been all used to retain our faith in the potato. The national food of Ireland was above suspicion. Now, along comes an analyst, who has discovered that potatoes contain large quantities of saxitoxin, which he asserts is poisonous to humanity, and cites as a support to his contention that a number of Austrian soldiers have been poisoned by eating potatoes containing saxitoxin. Still there is one ray of comfort in the fact that if what he says is true the Irish system must be so well used to the poison by this time as to be immune, and possibly buttermilk is an antidote for it. In fact, if what science says is true, all battions must be proof against certain poison, as the race would have been extinguished long ago. We know that what is good food for some is bad for others, and the chances are that if we keep on eating what agrees with us we will be able to feed the lacking dangers for a few months longer.

man who pays the printer.

Electric Printing.

Electricity may be about to cause a complete revolution in printing, says L'Electricien, Paris. An English photographer, Mr. Green, it says, has declared war, not of process and types, but on printing ink, which he believes he has rendered superfluous, and on the present kind of paper, which he wishes to change. L'Electricien describes the new process as follows:
"His (Green's) chief invention consists of an electrophoretic paper, whose composition is yet a secret. This new paper, which is easily decomposed under the action of the electric current, will not cost any more than common paper, we are assured; besides this, it will have to receive no glue, as is necessary with printing ink. Mr. Green asserts that he can run it only down with ink, but with the cylinders or forms now in use. He connects the cylinder of the rotary press or the form of the common press to the positive pole of a dynamo or storage battery, and at the same time he connects the negative pole to the cylinder or plate that carries the paper. The circuit is thus closed across the paper at points where the two metallic surfaces are in contact. Thus the electric paper undergoes a decomposition, which blackens it wherever the raised types touch it. This transformation of the paper and the resulting change of color constitute a well known chemical phenomenon due to electrolysis. The system of printing will be one of the cheapest known. We are assured that the trials have been remarkably successful."

A little girl was reading a chapter in the book of Revelations when she came to the part about the wicked people being cast into the bottomless pit. She then inquired the meaning of the word, bottomless. On this being explained to her she said, "But what will the bad people stand on?"

Marriage

Mr. Edward Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, thus deals with the question of marriage in his new book, "Success card."

The girl that a young man should marry, and the only girl he is safe to marry, is she who fits all his life, his every thought, who guides him in his every act, whose face comes before him in everything that he does—the girl, in short, without whom he feels he would be a blank, without whom he could not live.

That is the girl whom he loves, and it makes little difference whether such a girl be rich or poor, talented or not, travelled or untravelled. Enough is it for him if she is affectionate in her nature, sympathetic with his work, responsive to his thoughts, appreciative of his best qualities.

These are the traits in a woman which let the longest and remain with a man throughout his life. There are the traits in women which make good wives and better mothers. Knowledge is a good thing in a woman, but affection is infinitely better.

For never is the young man who marries the stupidest girl in the world, if she be affectionate, than he who marries the brightest girl in the universe, if she be cold, clammy and unresponsive in her disposition.

We laugh at sentiment, we men, when we are young; when we have lived a lifetime we reverence it, and the just becomes the tribute.

Tuelling the question of a young man's income when he marries, no rule can be laid down. There are the traits of married people who are living the longest of lives on $100 per year, while there are thousands, on the other hand, who struggle to keep out of debt on $1,000 a year.

And so it goes. Everything depends upon the people. Hundreds of men constantly ask the question: "Can I marry on $100, $200, or $1,000 a year?" No one can determine this question but the young fellow himself and particularly the girl whom he loves.

As I wrote to a young fellow who asked me if I believed it would be safe for him to marry on $1,000 per year, so do I say to all young men who are asking the question, irrespective of the amount involved: no one can tell you. You and the girl in question must settle that.

I cannot advise any young fellow what to do, but I know if I were earning $100, $200, or $1,000 a year, and I really loved the girl—felt, in other words, as if I could not live without her—and the girl was of the right kind—that is, sensible in her ideas, true in her facts, and of a marriageable age—I would let her settle the doubt for me. One thing is certain: the greatest safety in this world for a man is to place his interests in the keeping of the woman who loves him.

As She Is Written.

The following is a copy of a warrant recently issued by an Alabama Justice of the Peace: "To my lawful officer of the Peace Complaint on oath having been made before me that the offense of a Basing E. Wheeler By Coming in Hear Home Cursing Hear and threatening to knock her down & for her to cheat her mouth & drawed Back his arm and said he would knock hell out of her & then jump on Chappel and got out Dora Disappeared for one hour and Com Back a gun & did. Kick her. Her & Break the Back & Busted the Bone in two Places & said if She did not open the door he would Break her Down to any lawful officer of the State and he demanded to bring Frank Stevens before me this April the 13 1901. F. M. Price Justice of the Peace."

A recent visitor to the camp tells the following story: J. B. Fleishman, the well known travelling jeweler, of Jewish denomination, happened to be at the glacier House, on the C. P. R. main line, when Lord Aberdeen was visiting that popular summer resort for a few days. It was Sunday morning and His Highness, as usual, was preparing to hold religious service in a spacious portion of the hotel annex. With a huge bible under his arm he was strolling up and down the sidewalk along the boulevard, and perchance met Mr. Fleishman. "Good morning Sir," politely addressed His Honor, "we are about to hold service this morning and would be pleased to have you join us." Mr. Fleishman hesitated: "Nigh!" said he shaking his head, "too many of my enemies are here." "But" replied His Highness, "Christ our Saviour preached and went among His enemies, did he not?" "And dey didn't do a ting to Him eider, did they?"—Eagle.
